Chandni Khawaja, who recently published her first novel, "The Noble War."

Pictured to the left is Chandni Khawaja, who recently published her first novel, "The Noble War". She was the speaker at the 12/10/2014 Flemington Rotary Meeting.

Her book, she described, is the first of a trilogy that she started writing in 8th grade. Now a junior at Hunterdon Central, she is looking to graduate early and is seeking a college to attend. She noted that she is a fan of the Lord of the Rings books, which had inspired her to write a book series.

Hunterdon Central Student Publishes First Novel

Hunterdon Central junior Chandni Khawaja recently published her first novel, "The Noble War."

An active member of the Speech and Debate team and regionally recognized singer, Khawaja chose this topic because she wanted to highlight crucial issues such as the conflict of good and evil.

"The concept of what makes someone a hero versus what makes someone a villain all depends on whose side he or she is on and who is on your side," said Khawaja.

As a Readington resident of Guyanese and Pakistani descent, the author has pondered different perspectives in morality for years and began writing this book in eighth grade to share her insights in an accessible way. Her book is intended primarily for young adults.

"The Noble War" is currently available on Amazon and on Kindle.
